The informal @CUNY illegally leaked report summarizes the 10 month investigation of the team at CUNY into allegations against $sava collaborator Dr. Hoau-Yan Wang.

It is NOT the formal citation from CUNY as the Science article FALSELY states. The investigation took 10 months...

Matt, it was a formal investigation report that was sent to NIH. It found "egregious misconduct" because none of the underlying data was provided and the report stated that "it appears likely that no primary data and no research notebooks pertaining to the 31 allegations exist"

If @CUNY doesn't want to put their reputation or name behind this word document with zero evidence cited then yes it's worthless. For all we know you @Adrian_H who wrote this. I understand you're under investigation and currently short. Please stay out this.

It was an investigation that finished over a year ago... lol. The findings were not conclusive enough to release a decision. It's a joke.

Your imaginary timeline is incorrect.

That committee had a scope under CUNY and ORI rules, they stuck to it, and concluded "egregious misconduct" because no primary data exists to support anything Wang ever did. This is one of the most damning investigation reports of its kind.

The only sentence that gives details on what the egregious misconduct is on the first page. The end of the report is referring to that.

Do you really think that the "dog ate my homework" is going to work here?

There was no data and no record of any of the work. A reasonable inference and implication might be that the research was never actually done, or in other words, that IT IS ALL MADE UP.

It doesn't matter what I think when it comes to concluding data manipulation occurred. Data was presented. It did not meet their strict interpretation of Original Uncropped Images but do not clearly lay out why that is the case. If a DNA result is inconclusive in a crime, it...

I find it absolutely incredible that they could not get a forensic image expert to generate a satisfactory report for their needs.

Also, aren't you surprised with the lack of sophistication included in their report? Zero reference to actual policy violations and no conclusive...

The best evidence the experiments were run are all of the independent experiments that have been run that validate the findings.

There has been nothing that validates findings. $SAVA have published a bunch of half-baked, incoherent, specious nonsense in third-rate journals and sent press releases claiming some sort of "validation". It is nothing of the sort, & new papers have their own suspicious issues.

They're not third rate Journals. They're all first class. They also officially backed their findings with their reputations. Somthing Science nor @CUNY are willing to do.

The problem is there was no homework to be eaten. By @CUNY own polic anything before 2017 isn't required to be kept. So why would they then ask for the impossible? Also how would they know anything? They never contacted Dr. Wang or SAVA? Also this is not supported by @CUNY
